Wanted: spare snow

Snow is trucked in to Soldier Hollow near Midway from Wolf Creek Pass in Duchesne County Friday. Organizers of the U.S. World Cup Biathlon Championships arranged for the relocation after efforts to make snow failed last week because the air was not cold enough to keep the white stuff solid.

Journal Catholic High School.

Jackie was very popular. She was a student body officer and a stellar student. She was an athlete. She skied with the boys in her class. She was a gymnast.

She attended Colorado College in Colorado Springs, Colorado. She majored in Chemistry, displaying a bent for hard work and hard sciences. She was on the ski team. She worked during college, running campus dining halls. She made good friends whom she kept for a lifetime.

Jackie knew from the time she was a small girl that she wanted to practice medicine. She followed that dream to the University of Utah, where she earned her Physician Assistant degree. She worked in the Kamas area and in the Kaiparowits camp outside of Delta, Utah. She went to medical school at the University of Utah and earned her prized M.D. in 1988. She wanted to pursue Pediatrics and she matched at the University of Rochester, one of the most esteemed residency programs for Pediatrics in the country. Jackie wanted to work with children because they are not malingers. They are authentic about their hurts. Herself, Jackie never complained about the small things.

Treating a dangerously ill infant in the late summer of 1989, Jackie contracted Meningitis, which turned into Encephalitis. She was in a coma for 14 days. She struggled to emerge from this prison with as few impairments as possible. She lost the vision in her left eye and the hearing in her left ear. More than this, she suffered from intractable headaches most of the rest of her life. There was some relief, but a good part of almost every day involved serious pain and nausea. She didn't complain very much. She had courage. Her headaches limited her further practice of medicine. She worked at the University Pediatric outpatient clinic. All of us who knew her benefited from her medical advice and counsel. Had fate permitted it, she hoped to return to active medical practice once her children were in school.

Jackie married Bob Steiner on May 18, 1991. They were blessed with a daughter, Francesca Marie Steiner on March 17, 1997. Francesca filled every moment of Jackie's life with joy, even through the headaches. Jackie wanted to give Francesca a sibling so that she would not be alone when she got older. Jackie gave birth to a gorgeous little boy, James Reichart Steiner on January 25, 2000. She called him Jamie and nurtured him to life from the great depth of her soul. She loved Francesca and Jamie as a completely Ernest Arthur Higgins, builder, cowboy, reiner or rales, died peacefully at his home following complications from heart disease, January 27, 2000.

Art was born June 6, 1923 to Winifred M. Grandshaw Higgins and Ernest Hart Higgins in Rahway, N.J. He, with his parents and younger brother Dennis, moved to Salt Lake City in 1925.

Art was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and a High Priest. He held many positions and especially loved working with the youth. Much to his bishop's chagrin, he often enjoyed taking the opportunity to raise the level of consciousness of his fellow worshippers. Art loved the Lord and to serve Him was dad's greatest desire. He did this with acts of kindness to widows, children and the homeless. He loved the scriptures and studying Biblical history and set stories in the memories of his grandchildren.

Art married Ruth Boyce in the Salt Lake LDS Temple November of 1946. Together they resided in Centerville, Utah and had four children, Eileen, George, Joan and Clare. They divorced, he later married Doris Hatch Farley. She had three children from a previous marriage, John, Elizabeth (Liz), and Adrienne. Together they had one daughter, Heather. Doris died in 1992. Arthur then married Dianne Williams. Art was proud of the smart, independent children he raised, he loved his many grandchildren. He was proud of their accomplishments from success at home, school or work, to serving missions for the LDS Church, to the beautiful saddle recently made by one of his grandsons. He always had time for a treat, a hug and a story of his adventures. He was also proud of his English (Irish?) heritage, and supported his family in genealogical research.

Art proudly served his country in World War II as a member of the US Army Signal Corp. He was a Radar Design and Combat Specialist in the South Pacific. He loved telling stories of the war according to Art.

Art was an excellent student and loved learning. He graduated from Granite High School where he was the Quarterback of the football team. He continued his studies receiving an Electrical Engineering Degree in 1943 and later a Civil Engineering Degree in 1950. He was a member and served as President of the Utah chapter of the Chi Fr.
